

CAPTIONING SERVICES

Communication Access Realtime Translation (CART) converts the spoken word into instant text. This service is generally for hard of hearing persons, not familiar with American Sign Language (ASL), that need to translate spoken words into printed English in a realtime format. In classrooms, at performances, for seminars or corporate presentations, this simultaneous text can be shown on any of four state-of-the-art display devices: laptop screen, television screen, light emitting device (LCD) projection screen or liquid crystal display (LED) message display signs. These display options offer the ultimate in flexibility, from a laptop for a single student to a large LED display sign for thousands at a live performance. Some service providers also have the capability to provide services from an off-site location. A qualified captioner should possess either a:

- State of California Certified Shorthand Reporter (CSR) certificate, or
- National Court Reporters Association Professional Reporter Certificate or Certificate of Merit
